

TOP FEW TO FLEE H-BLAST

TOP politicians and civil servants, together with members of the Royal Family, would flee Britain to boltholes in Canada should nuclear war appear imminent.

The sinister £6 billion plan unveiled on Thursday by Defence Secretary Francis Pym included the updating of the present Polaris submarine-borne H-missiles and a firm undertaking to allow the United States to site Pershing and Cruise missiles in East Anglia and other parts of the country.

The Tory plan means that Britain will be turned into a nuclear missile launch-pad for US imperialism. It will be a No.1 target in the event of nuclear war.

The Tory contingency plans include the formation of a special Royal Marine unit, codenamed Commacchio, to be based permanently at the Faslane Polaris base on the Clyde.

The pretext for forming this elite force is to protect North Sea oil installations. But it can also be used to protect the select few who are destined for evacuation in the event of nuclear war.

Chop awaits Tory nod

TORY MINISTERS have almost finalised the latest round of spending cuts which will affect social service payments and housing. The new cut-back of around £1,000m is awaiting final Cabinet approval.

Tories would save elite from nuclear annihilation

BY JOHN SPENCER

As the world crisis of the capitalist system deepens, imperialism is now openly preparing for war against the Soviet Union and has abandoned all pretence of detente and co-existence with the Kremlin.

The Thatcher government's stance of extreme anti-Soviet belligerence only underlines the Tories' willingness to sacrifice almost the entire population in an all-out counter-revolutionary war.

Plans for evacuation in the event of nuclear war apply only to the elite few. The vast majority of the population have already been written off as 'expendable' and the government no longer bothers even with the pretence of 'civil defence'.

As Thatcher bangs the war-drums and the Tories allocate billions for more efficient means of mass slaughter, the 'top people' are cynically prepared to clear out if things get too hot.

This is the secret side of Thatcher's war policy: the rats are getting ready to leave the nuclear launching pad before the bombs start to fall.

U.S. INFLATION WORST SINCE 1946

WASHINGTON — American consumer prices surged upwards in December, bringing the 1979 inflation rate to 13.3 per cent and making it the worst year for inflation since the removal of World War II price controls in 1946.

The Labour Department said sharply higher food costs helped push prices up by 1.2 per cent in December, up from the 1-per-cent jump in November.

The annual rate was almost 50 per cent up on the 9-per-cent increase in 1978. It was the highest since the 18.2-per-cent jump in 1946.

The higher cost of imported oil, plus initial moves to phase out government price controls on domestic supplies, pushed energy prices up 37.4 per cent.

Even without energy, inflation would have been worse in 1979 than in the previous year. Prices of goods and services other than energy rose 11.1 per cent.

The 1979 performance meant US inflation rate was one of the worst among industrial countries. US prices have doubled since the end of the 1960s.

Prices last year rose 5.2 per cent in Switzerland, 5.4 per cent in West Germany and 5.8 per cent in Japan.

The US rate was closer to the 19.8 per cent in Italy and 11.8 per cent in France. British prices were running 17.4 per cent ahead of a year earlier with one month to go in 1979.

● Inflation in the European Common Market reached 9.9 per cent last year, the Community's statistics office said yesterday. In 1978 it averaged 7.5 per cent.

'Free Mandela' bank siege trio killed

PRETORIA — Police with guns blazing stormed a Pretoria bank last night and killed three black men who had been holding staff and customers hostage for almost seven hours to back political demands, police said.

Several hostages were wounded, the police said.

Police sources said the men had demanded freedom for black nationalist Nelson Mandela, who has been imprisoned on Robben Island for the past two decades because of his struggle against the apartheid regime.

Witnesses said that when the bank was stormed one of the men apparently set off a hand grenade, wounding some of the more than 20 hostages.

The three black men were armed with Soviet-made assault rifles and hand grenades, the sources said.

They strolled into the Afrikaner-owned Volkskas Bank in suburban Silverton shortly after midday with their weapons concealed in handbags.

Blacks have never in the past so openly and directly challenged white authority in South Africa.

The climax to South Africa's most dramatic urban political attack came as darkness fell, just past 7p.m.

Police, who had laid siege to the bank, charged in. There was the crackle of gunfire, rifle and automatic, and the blast of a hand-grenade.

Moments later, six ambulances raced away from the scene, lights flashing and sirens wailing.

RE-CALL ENGINEERS' NATIONAL COMMITTEE

Robinson doesn't need
'friends' like these

DEREK ROBINSON has many apparent supporters — from his fellow members of the Communist Party and the rank-and-filists of the Socialist Workers Party, to Labour 'left' MPs and the Yorkshire miners' leader Arthur Scargill.

It has become clear in the past three months, since Robinson was sacked as AUEW convenor at the Leyland Longbridge plant, that with friends like this, he had no need of enemies.

The closer the right-wing AUEW leaders move to axe Robinson following their time-wasting executive inquiry into his dismissal, the louder these 'friends' shout their support for the victimised convenor.

Avoiding

And the louder they shout, the more empty their words become. They protest too much and can be seen clearly avoiding taking up any real fight against the full-time engineering union leaders who are preparing to give Robinson what they hope will be a coup de grace.

The Communist Party and its paper 'Morning Star' have organised protest resolutions to the union executive and to the inquiry committee. They have deliberately dropped coverage of the reinstatement campaign from their paper.

The revisionists of the Socialist Workers Party have complemented the work of the Stalinists by conducting a 'campaign' to have a ballot set up to re-elect the union leaders.

This scheme needed 10 per cent of branches in support before it could even be considered under union rules.

This week's 'Socialist Worker' publication contains an entire page devoted to the fact that their Engineers Charter front organisation has failed to win the backing of the required 250 branches.

Of course they don't present it in this way. They say the campaign 'is nearly there' — but in fact the total number of branches supporting the militant-sounding move has hardly altered for weeks.

The fuss they make about the campaign is to cover up its emptiness and the fact that it cannot — and was never intended to — secure the reinstatement of Derek Robinson.

The same can be said of the conference which takes place in London today of the Stalinists' Liaison Committee for the Defence of Trade Unions.

This gathering is being fully supported by the Socialist Workers Party who are crawling and whining to the Stalinists for 'Unity now' and have been planning to bring along as many delegates as possible to boost the occasion.

The conference will give the Stalinists an opportunity to protest over the Robinson sacking and condemn Leyland management and the Tories, while letting the AUEW executive off almost scot-free, as the issues are blurred in a broad discussion on anti-trade union attacks.

While awaiting the outcome of the official inquiry into Robinson's sacking, the Stalinists have helped AUEW president and secretary Duffy and Boyd to allow the situation to cool down with Robinson outside the gate.

Day after day their paper carried either nothing on the issue or mentioned it so briefly that it was insignificant.

Yesterday they capped the betrayal of their leading member in the car industry by issuing front-page congratulations to the TUC leaders for refusing to break off relations with Soviet trade unions.

Apart from being an example of Stalinist subservience to the trade union bureaucracy, it was made to leaders who have deliberately refused to take up the fight for trade union rights in the Robinson sacking and are presently aiding the Tories in setting a trap for steel strikers.

Undermining

The TUC leaders have done nothing in defence of Robinson. Their interests are the same as those of the AUEW top officials who wanted to see the back of Robinson and the undermining of the shop stewards' movement so they can more easily collaborate with the Tories.

The one issue that all the 'friends' of Robinson have determinedly avoided is the demand for the re-call of the AUEW National Committee — the union's policy-making body which alone has the power to bring full-time officials to order and make them fight to reinstate Robinson.

The Workers Revolutionary Party says this is the way to defend basic rights in the AUEW and to lead the fight for the reinstatement of Derek Robinson.

We urge all AUEW members to demand the re-call of the National Committee and to further demand that the TUC fight the Tories.

COURT 'CAN'T STOP STEEL
STRIKE' — SIRS

LORD DENNING, the Master of the Rolls, will decide today whether or not the steel union ISTC can lawfully call a strike or order picketing by its members in private steel companies.

Denning will hear the case before a special sitting of the Appeal Court following a judge's refusal yesterday to grant injunctions to 16 private steel firms against the union.

Justice Kenneth Jones refused the injunctions at a three-hour private hearing. The employers decided immediately to appeal against his decision.

But steel union leader Bill Sirs said no matter what the Appeal Court ruling was, nothing could stop the strike by 20,000 ISTC men in the private sector getting under way at 6a.m. on Sunday morning.

His executive could not meet to change their decision until Tuesday at the earliest.

Sirs was speaking after having secret talks with British Steel Corporation chiefs Bob Scholey and David Grieves.

The two sides came together at an undisclosed venue to explore prospects for full negotiations.

BY ALAN BOTT

He said the alterations in the corporation's original offer did not merit re-calling the negotiating team.

BSC said only that they would withdraw some of their minor conditions. It remains unchanged that every penny being held out to steelmen as a wage rise will be paid for by increased productivity and with at least 64,000 sackings throughout the country.

Steel industry craftsmen's negotiators along with representatives of the transport union and the GMWU, who have already had talks with BSC chiefs this week, will have a further meeting with the employers on Sunday.

Redpath announce 1,100
steel sackings

OVER a thousand sackings are planned in a shock announcement yesterday by Redpath Engineering, the constructional and engineering section of British Steel.

The company, a subsidiary of Redpath Dorman Long, sent a letter to individual employees informing them of the closure of four major plants throughout the country.

The worst jobs toll is at Acklam, Middlesbrough, where 630 jobs will be lost. At Glegarnock, Ayrshire, 170 are to be sacked, with 140 at Langley Mill in Nottingham and Consett, Co. Durham.

At Scunthorpe, Redpath plan to transfer a reduced engineering capacity to the BSC works in the same town.

In the letter, management blame a continued world recession in construction activity and say they have an excess of capacity for fabricated steelwork.

Redpath say that their profitability has been hit by a downturn in export orders. They attribute this to the rate of inflation and a 'strong' currency in the UK.

Engineers and boilermakers unions are expected to discuss reaction to the proposed sackings at meetings early next week.

ENOCH POWELL last night said that Ulster Secretary Humphrey Atkins often seems like 'the man in the moon' when he is in northern Ireland. He claimed Atkins made a series of 'gaffs and blunders' following bad advice from his department.

THE NOTTINGHAM 'Evening Post', which refused to reinstate 28 sacked journalists after last year's provincial newspaper strike, has left the Newspaper Society, because the employers' joint industrial policy was 'meaningless'.

RACAL, the fast-expanding electronics group, plans to take over Decca for about £65m.

SILICON CHIP processing will have a devastating effect on jobs, opposition environment spokesman Denis Howell said during a Commons debate on leisure yesterday. By 1983, 880,000 jobs would be lost, but only 40,000 extra jobs created.

Hatchets being sharpened

THE sacking of three senior shop stewards at a Glasgow factory has sharpened fears that employers have been encouraged by the AUEW executive's retreat over the dismissal of Derek Robinson.

SCM typewriter factory convenor Donald McGregor, shop stewards' committee chairman Matthew Tolbert, and safety representative John Tolbert, have all been sacked by the Canadian boss of the former Olivetti plant.

The workforce of 850 has also been locked out but management has directed its main attack on the three, for leading a 'sit-in' over a safety issue.

'This confirms what a lot of us have been saying,' commented Arthur Donaghy, AUEW convenor at the Burnough's factory, Cumberland, yesterday.

'Our shop stewards quarterly meeting condemned the vacillation of the executive council over Robinson's victimisation. He had an inalienable right to pass out the information to his members.

'Our executive must come out in complete support of Robinson and call official action for his reinstatement. The inquiry was totally unnecessary.

'The TGWU called official action but Robinson's own union cut the ground from underneath them.'

Donaghy said the new Glasgow sackings meant other employers were 'sharpening their hatchets'.

He continued: 'The executive must be instructed to call the necessary action. The recall of the National Committee of our union is the logical vehicle to achieve this end.'

'There must be resolutions from every branch and district demanding that the executive support Robinson.'

GOLD moved back under $700 an ounce on the bullion markets yesterday. Four days ago it broke through $850 for the first time.

LEYLAND workers at Bathgate, Scotland, yesterday agreed to the axing of nearly 700 jobs. Stewards had agreed with the management's plea of hardship.

SCOTTISH trade unionists are to hold a 'major demonstration' against Tory policies in Glasgow on March 8 — a day before the TUC's national demonstration.

BUSINESSMEN will continue trading with the Soviet Union despite the Tories' packaged 'reprisals' over the invasion of Afghanistan, experts predicted yesterday.

FIREMAN
SHIP FIRE

A FIREMAN was killed and four of his colleagues injured yesterday in an explosion aboard a tanker at Regents Canal Dock in London's East End.

Leading Fireman Stephen Maynard, 26, died in spite of attempts to rescue him after he fell from a ladder into the hold of the 800-ton tanker 'Rudi-M'.

It was the second fire in a week aboard the vessel which has been used to carry liquid petroleum gas and is being refitted.

Five men were fighting a fire in the hold yesterday when Leading Fireman Maynard decided they had to leave because the blaze was out of control.

He fell from a ladder after his four colleagues had climbed to safety.

The four survivors were treated for burns and two were detained in hospital.

The incident brings the London Fire Brigades casualty toll to 24 injured and one killed in the last ten days. All casualties have been the result of explosions.

The first, in south London, involved a cylinder of acetylene gas stored in a private garage.

The second incident involved an explosion at a Barking chemical factory in which 12 men were hurt. London brigade officials had to produce an immediate report on the accident which was sent to 10 Downing Street in case awkward questions were asked in Parliament.

THIS weekend is the last main opportunity for raising our Fund. There are only six days left, and still £3,729.33 to raise — so rush in every amount you can.

The steelmen are hardening in their battle against the Tories. More and more trade unionists are entering the struggle against Thatcher as unemployment rapidly grows, prices rocket and wages are cut.

This is the time to build the revolutionary leadership — and News Line is vital for making this development.

So please, let's see one great effort for our Fund this weekend. Rush your donations to:

Commons committee to probe cell deaths

AN inquiry into 245 deaths in police custody in the last ten years is to be undertaken by the newly-appointed Commons Home Affairs Committee.

The Home Office issued the figure for police deaths in England and Wales after inquiries by Labour MP Michael Meacher. Including deaths in Scottish police custody, the total figure is over 350 for the period 1969-79.

The issue came to a head after a storm of protest over the death in police custody of Huyton labourer Jimmy Kelly, 53, in June last year.

Five eye-witnesses have said they saw Kelly assaulted and beaten by police when he stopped when returning home from a local pub.

But the Home Office has turned down demands for a full public inquiry into Kelly's death and the Director of Public Prosecutions has announced there will be no charges against the police over Kelly's killing.

According to the Home Office, 102 of the 245 deaths in England and Wales occurred in hospital, and 142 in police cells. One person died of natural causes while attending court.

The Kelly Action Committee disclosed yesterday that Gilbert Grey QC will represent the family at the inquest in Whiston, near Liverpool, in March.

Kelly's brother Eddie said: 'The news of the Commons inquiry has really pleased me. It's what we've been fighting for all along.'

'It's about time an inquiry was ordered. This would seem to be the only way that the truth will be revealed.'

Action committee chairman Tommy Banks said: 'It's fantastic news. We will give all the help we possibly can to the Home Affairs Committee.'

TOP COPS' BOOTS TOO BIG

SOME police chiefs 'are beginning to think they are above the law', former Home Office minister Alex Lyon, Labour MP for York, said in the Commons yesterday.

'They must never be allowed to think that or that they are above the constraints of democratic control,' he said.

Lyon, in a short adjournment debate on the relationship between the Home Office and Chief Constables, said 'Disturbing reports on Operation Countryman' indicated 'that police corruption is never going to be brought to light because of existing members of the force and some of those in high positions in the Metropolitan Police.'

The central issue was lack of control over what police did, Lyon said. 'The weakness is accountability of chief officers.'

'There is concern, especially in Lancashire, about the refusal of chief officers to discuss police activities in their areas,' he said.

The Chief Constable of Devon and Cornwall, John Alderson, and the Chief Constable of Greater Manchester, James Anderton, 'each illustrate the dangers of what I call the irresponsibility of chief officers.'

They think they're above the law

Anderton succumbed to the attractions of the media, Lyon said.

Outrageous

'He will now say the most outrageous things, including that he won't obey the law, to get himself on television.'

'He is a good officer, but he has succumbed to this temptation, because he believes he is above the control of the police authority and apparently the Home Secretary.'

'Mr Alderson also regards himself as irresponsible,' Lyon said. 'He believes he can create communities where police do the work of the social security department and housing department, without overall control of the local authorities.'

'The reason they take that view is that chief officers are beginning to think they are above the law. They must never be allowed to think that, or that they are above the constraints of democratic control.'

'If they think that, officers below are also likely to think that.'

The chairman of the Police Federation James Jardine and police officers had to face up to the fact that all police 'must be under a system of control that does not allow them to get out of hand and does ensure that they are brought to book very quickly.'

Lyon urged that the Director of Public Prosecutions should issue a short statement to explain why it had been decided not to prosecute in a case of complaint against the police.

Complaints

'Without an explanation the public is left completely in the dark, as well as the individual who is complaining. This inevitably leads to complaints of whitewash.'

He also asked why there had been no statement about the succession of deaths in police custody by the Inspector of Constabularies.

More hospital occupations says union

BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT

MORE hospital occupations are likely if services to patients are cut, the health service union COHSE declared yesterday.

'We don't relish the idea of work-ins and occupations. But we are prepared to occupy hospitals where it appears to be the only way to maintain a service,' a union spokesman said.

The policy of staging hospital occupations to defend patient services against Tory government attacks on the National Health Service was decided by the Confederation of Health Service Employees last year.

Policy

It is a policy which deserves the unqualified support of every worker and trade unionist, in the health service and outside it.

But it is a policy which can only go part of the way towards defending health services which the Thatcher Cabinet is hell bent on destroying — if it can get away with it.

The COHSE spokesman added: 'Each case will be decided on its merits, but if there are cut backs it is quite likely there will be more occupations.'

His statement follows the occupation of St George's Hospital at Hyde Park Corner, London (right) which began on Thursday.

Package

The closure of St George's, famous for its pioneering work in heart surgery, and St Benedict's hospital in Tooting — occupied last year — is part of a £6m cuts package decided by the Merton, Sutton and Wandsworth Area Health Authority.

Another five hospitals in the area are also scheduled for closure under the plan.

Yesterday at St George's, health service workers were outside on the picket line to prevent the transfer of patients and equipment to other hospitals.

THE occupation of St George's hospital at Hyde Park, London, has received the support of surgeons, consultants, doctors, nurses and local residents. A NUPE union spokesman said yesterday that one of the encouraging features of the occupation, begun on Thursday, was that the whole workforce was behind the fight to save the hospital. An occupation committee was formed and met for the first time yesterday

Alan Ellis, the hospital's National Union of Public Employees branch secretary, said the picket was going strong. 'We don't envisage any problems unless management try to move patients or equipment,' he said. Inside work was progressing as normal.

THE NUMBER of NHS hospital beds available daily dropped dramatically between 1970 and 1978.

In 1970, numbers of beds available daily were 423,621. Eight years later it had dropped to 369,235. Health undersecretary Sir George Young has said in a Commons written reply.

These figures do not reflect the bulk of the health service cuts made under the last Labour government and those now being undertaken by the Tories.

DANGER: Nuclear waste on the move

BY RICHARD TAPSALL

ONE of the most dangerous aspects of the nuclear industry is the transportation of nuclear waste from Britain and abroad to the reprocessing plant at Windscale in Cumbria.

Several times a week trains pass through London carrying up to three tons of highly radioactive and potentially lethal waste products.

Nuclear materials also travel by road, sea, and air but the majority of the traffic is by rail. An accident or sabotage in any densely populated area could spell catastrophe — a fact recognised by the New York Health Department which, in 1975, banned the transportation of waste through the city.

Accident

The implications of an accident happening to one of these trains are frightening.

Using the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority's own computer Dr Charles Wakstein, an American nuclear engineer, showed that if all the waste was released 6,000 people would die from cancers developing over the next 15 to 20 years.

If a 100 per cent leak

A container of nuclear fuel elements is transported through a Cumbrian village on its way to Windscale occurred, an area of three miles would be made uninhabitable for 70 years, and if only 10 per cent of the waste was released this area would have to be evacuated for five years.

New York based its ban on similar figures, yet London is still faced with the almost daily risk of disaster.

Only quarter-scale models are tested for safety and not the actual containers which hold the waste.

Regulations only require containers to withstand fires lasting 30 minutes and impacts of 30 m.p.h., yet there are records of railway fires lasting several hours, and the containers travel at speeds of up to 60 m.p.h.

In addition, the Boiler-makers Union discovered last year that sub-standard welding had been used for the bottles within the flasks, and that a leak could easily have occurred before they were withdrawn from use.

A commitment to a nuclear programme of 20 reactors by the year 2,000 (in line with that recently announced by the government) will cost $35 billion at today's prices.

Yet even if it is feasible to build one reactor a year — and there is every indication that it is not — nuclear power will supply at most only one fifth of our energy needs.

Aspect

As such, the transportation of nuclear waste is a dangerous aspect of a dangerous and costly industry.

To publicise the risks of the transportation of nuclear waste the All London Anti-Nuclear Alliance is holding a demonstration today, Saturday January 26, at 1p.m. from Primrose Hill to Willesden Green.

Jimmy Kelly fund raisers harassed

BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT

THE inquest into the killing of Jimmy Kelly, the 53-year-old unemployed man from Huyton who died while in police custody, is expected to be the centre of a legal struggle commanding greater attention than the Thorpe case.

A verdict which implicated the police in causing his death could lead to prosecutions which would immediately affect police morale at a time when the Tory government are relying on them to deal with a general strike.

Already the Merseyside Chief Constable, Ken Oxford, has retained a top QC to represent the Merseyside police.

The Jimmy Kelly Action Committee, set up by friends and relatives of the dead man to fight to expose the truth about the killing, is now campaigning for £10,000 to pay for a QC of the same category.

The police are taking a keen interest in the progress of this fund.

Three youth who went to a benefit dance last Saturday organised by the Action Committee were arrested on their way home and kept in police cells overnight, but released without any charges being made.

Gerard Donaldson, one of the youth, said he was accused of stealing a CID car and was threatened with charges of taking and driving away and reckless driving.

In the course of his interrogation he was questioned about the Jimmy Kelly Action Committee. The police were particularly interested in how much had been collected at the dance for the appeal fund.

Insidious

This kind of police attention is not new to the Action Committee; but what may be more insidious is the role of the police internal inquiry, led by assistant chief constable David Gerty of the West Midlands police.

It was on the basis of Gerty's report that the DPP decided that no charges should be brought against any policemen.

It has since been established, however, that the 'inquiry' team did not interview at least three of the eye-witnesses to the attack on Kelly.

This forms a striking parallel to the case of Liddle Towers who was killed by police in Co. Durham in 1976.

A jury at the inquest decided that the police had killed him, but it was 'justifiable' homicide.

At the Durham inquest the Towers' legal representatives were denied access to essential statements, such as those of the pathologists, as well as not being permitted to call their own witnesses.

The police evidence was based on an internal investigation carried out by Chief Superintendent Collinson, who had promised Liddle Towers' mother to 'leave no stone unturned' to get the truth.

However, when the Liddle Towers Action Committee conducted its own investigation, it discovered witnesses he had not bothered to contact. Those that were seen were not asked to identify which policemen had actually kicked Towers as he lay on the ground.

The Jimmy Kelly Action Committee have made it clear that they are not prepared to be the victims of the same kind of cover-up. Their appeal fund has already met with an eager response from workers and trade unionists throughout Merseyside. But they have a long way to go.

Donations should be sent to: The Jimmy Kelly Appeal Fund, 85 Barkbeth Road, Huyton, Liverpool L36 3TU

Eight years since Bloody Sunday

THIS weekend marks the eight anniversary of Bloody Sunday, 1972 when British army paratroopers killed 14 unarmed civilians on the streets of Derry in the north of Ireland.

In Derry this Sunday, thousands will travel from all over Ireland to meet at the Bishop's Field in Creggan, the spot from where the mass march of January 30, 1972 started.

Withdrawal

They will demand the withdrawal of British troops from Ireland and will declare their support for the four-year long fight of men 'on the blanket' in the H-Blocks of Long Kesh concentration camp to be treated as political prisoners.

There will also be a national march in England — through Birmingham this Sunday organised by Sinn Fein.

They are also demanding political status for all Irish prisoners, and repatriation of all Republican prisoners in English jails.

● In a Commons question to Tory Home Secretary William Whitelaw yesterday, right-wing Birmingham MP Jill Knight demanded that Sinn Fein be proscribed.

She said Sunday's march in commemoration of the Bloody Sunday victims was 'provocative and insulting' and suggested the police might want to stop the march.

Conscription

Today, as Tory MPs demand the return of conscription and the government itself is hell bent on cold war policies, the warning to the working class of Britain and Ireland that was spelt out in blood in January 1972 must be remembered and understood.

● Birmingham march assembles 2p.m. at Sparshill Park, Stratfield Road — March to Victoria Square, City Centre.

Sinn Fein and the unions

THE Sinn Fein Ard Fheis in Dublin last weekend voted to adopt a policy of developing an 'economic resistance movement'.

In doing so they formalised the strategy of intervening in and supporting the industrial and economic struggles of Irish workers.

As part of this turn a Trade Union Department has been set up. Its national spokesman, Paddy Bolger, is a leading activist in the Irish Post Office Engineering Union. In this interview he outlines the Sinn Fein policy towards the trade union movement.

News Line: What is the role of the Trade Union Department?

Paddy Bolger: To co-ordinate the activity of Republicans in the trade unions and to support trade unionists in their struggles against the capitalists. In so doing, we hope to politicise workers and win them to support the struggle for the socialist Republic.

NL: What is your view of the PAYE strike?

PB: It is an indication of workers' ability to respond to a challenge to the state if organised politically. At the moment workers are not conscious of the need for socialism. There is no mass workers' party as in Britain or in Continental countries. It is notable that the tax demonstrations were organised at grass roots level.

NL: How do you see the role of the trade union leaderships?

PB: We recognise clearly the treacherous role of the bureaucracy in enforcing National Wage Agreements. Sinn Fein opposes all class collaboration and reformism in the trade union movement. We are prepared to work with all progressive elements in the unions. As for the Irish Congress of Trade Unions, they have to be pressurised into supporting activities like the PAYE campaign.

The Sinn Fein delegation on the massive march against the tax laws in Dublin last Tuesday

NL: The Fianna Fail government has threatened to bring in legislation outlawing unofficial strikes — what is your response to this?

PB: Sinn Fein as a socialist movement will oppose any coercive laws against trade unionists. In 1969 we opposed the two-tier picketing system, adopted by the ICTU in the wake of the maintenance workers' strike, which was aimed at stifling sympathy strikes.

Conflict

We support any group of militant trade unionists who come into conflict with the ICTU bureaucracy. Many such groups have risen in protest at the stranglehold of Congress procedures for disputes. Even whole unions, such as AGEMOU (engineers) have taken on the bureaucracy.

NL: What role does the trade union movement play in the struggle for national liberation?

PB: The official policy of the Irish trade union movement is the reformist 'Better Life for All Campaign'. We are totally opposed to this policy. It lies about the reality of the situation. It accepts partition and sublimates issues behind the Loyalist veto.

NL: Is there any perspective in Sinn Fein's policies for the unity of Protestant and Catholic workers against British imperialism?

PB: This unity is wholly desirable and even essential for a socialist Ireland. But it is impossible while British imperialism remains. We agree with James Connolly who said partition would result in 'a carnival of reaction' in both partitionist states. The role of British imperialism has always been to protect the Loyalists — economically, politically and militarily as a wedge against working class unity.

NL: The Tory government is committed to stopping all aid to industrial lame ducks.

In Belfast, for instance, the shipbuilding industry is being rundown with the consequent loss of thousands of jobs in the yards and in dependent engineering firms. These jobs were the monopoly of Protestant workers. Do you see any basis in such events for winning Protestant workers to the anti-imperialist struggle?

Bemused

PB: Frankly, I am bemused at the lack of response from Loyalist workers to the demands of the Civil Rights movement in 1969. Since then we have clearly declared our socialist policies and have made repeated appeals to Loyalist workers in our publications to break with Unionism and support our class demands.

The demand for a united Ireland is a socialist demand — this was recognised by all great socialist leaders since Marx, Engels, Lenin and Connolly. Objectively it is not in the interests of Protestant workers to remain under the grip of British imperialism. Yes, there is a potential for coming together when the economic situation worsens to crisis proportions. However, we do not think this is imminent.

Israeli overflight

SIDON, Lebanon — Israeli jets yesterday flew low over the south Lebanese port of Sidon drawing anti-aircraft fire from Palestinian and leftist positions, residents said. It was the first overflight by Israeli planes since Syrian troops around Sidon started a withdrawal of certain units last weekend. The independent Beirut newspaper 'An Nahra' reported yesterday that the Syrian government had advised the Palestinian commando movement to put its forces on alert because Damascus believed Israel was preparing for an offensive.

Gaddafi warns US

TEHRAN — Libyan leader Muammar Gaddafi has warned the United States that his country would use oil as a weapon if the US intervened militarily in Iran, the afternoon newspaper 'Etelat' reported. In an interview with the newspaper, Gaddafi said: 'We have officially informed the US that American military interference in Iran simply means military intervention in Libya, and it is absolutely natural that we use our oil as a weapon against the US

Silver speculation

LIMA — The Peruvian government is to take legal proceedings against officials responsible for disastrous speculation on the silver market, reported to have cost the country between $20m and $70m. A government decree said the operation last year by senior officials of Minpeco, the state mineral marketing board, had been detrimental to the interests of Peru, but it did not identify those involved. According to the well-informed English-language weekly 'Lima Times', Minpeco sold up to 13 million ounces of silver it did not have in the belief that it could buy back later much cheaper and make a big profit. Instead prices kept rising.

More oil profits

NEW YORK — Texaco Incorporated, the world's third biggest oil company, has reported 1979 profits of $1.76 billion, more than double its earnings in 1978. Gulf Oil Corporation also joined the growing list of big oil companies announcing sharply improved profits for 1979, reporting last year's profits up 68 per cent at £1.32 billion. Texaco said its 1979 profits were up 110 per cent on the previous year, despite a rise in revenues of only 34 per cent to $39.1 billion.

Australia inflation up

CANBERRA — Australia's inflation rate surged into double figures in the last three months of 1979, the biggest quarterly jump in prices for four years, the government said yesterday. Higher health costs and petrol prices pushed the consumer price index up by 3 per cent in the last quarter giving an annual inflation rate of 10 per cent, compared to 9.2 for the previous quarter. It was the biggest quarterly increase since December 1976 when prices showed a 6-per-cent leap. Inflation last touched double figures in Australia in 1977.

Chinese explosions

HONG KONG — Six explosions on board Chinese passenger trains have caused a number of deaths and injuries this month, the pro-Peking Hong Kong newspaper 'Ta Kung Pao' said yesterday. The newspaper, quoting a report by the New China News Agency, said the explosions had also caused heavy damage to the trains. As a result of the explosions, railway officials had discussed imposing a government ban on travellers carrying inflammable and explosive goods, it added.

CHINA GETS US WAR AID

BY OUR FOREIGN STAFF

WASHINGTON — The United States has offered China military supplies and the coveted 'most-favoured nation' trading status in an attempt to build a new axis directed against the Soviet Union.

The moves by the Carter administration are part of the escalation of the Cold War aimed at unifying all the enemies of the Soviet Union and strengthening the position of the US in south-west Asia and the Middle East.

The new policy is a major shift from previous stated positions of the Carter administration which had claimed in the past to be seeking 'balanced relations' with China and the Soviet Union.

The Pentagon offer to sell military equipment to China followed a visit earlier this week to Peking by US Defence Secretary Harold Brown, whose talks with Chinese officials centred on military co-operation.

The White House says the US has no intention at this point of selling lethal weapons to China, which for many years was subjected to a strategic embargo by the US.

But the supply of military equipment was described in Washington as 'a small incremental step' which could lead to the sale of much more advanced equipment.

The Chinese Stalinists have no scruples about lining up with US imperialism against the USSR. On the contrary, they have been seeking support for their anti-Soviet crusade from the most right-wing European political figures and from dictators throughout the world.

The announcement of military aid by the Pentagon was followed within hours by the passage through Congress of the China Trade Bill, conferring privileged status on Chinese trade with the US.

A similar measure aimed at improving trade with the Soviet Union has been blocked on Congress since 1974.

The growing ties between China and the United States are mirrored in the relations between Peking and the Tory government in Britain.

The Tories are expected to approve the sale to China of Harrier jump-jets, which Soviet commentators have charged will be used to increase China's military presence in the South China Sea.

The Soviet Union has warned that the supply of these jets represents a potential threat to the security of other south-east Asian nations, primarily of course Vietnam.

China has already gone to war against Vietnam and the Vietnamese have charged the Peking leaders with escalating tension along the border in preparation for further hostilities.

The United States has tacitly supported China's attacks on Vietnam in the past, and is almost certainly encouraging further military strikes against Vietnam by the Chinese.

The latest turn of US policy towards even closer links with China poses a direct threat to the Vietnamese revolution as well as a potential menace to the Soviet Union itself.

A-plant was minutes from meltdown

WASHINGTON — Last year's nuclear accident at the Three Mile Island power plant came perilously close to turning into a 'meltdown', an event that could have resulted in a major disaster, an independent study said.

The study, made public by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC), said the Three Mile Island nuclear plant came within between 30 and 60 minutes of 'meltdown'.

This would have required 'at least precautionary evacuation of thousands of people living near the plant, and potentially serious public health and safety consequences for the immediate area,' the report said.

Even without a meltdown, the accident, which occurred on March 28, caused severe dislocation in the Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, region, with hundreds of people leaving their homes.

A 'meltdown' would have occurred had the radioactive rods in the plant stayed too long without coolant water. At worst — which the study said was not likely — a meltdown could have resulted in the radioactive core of the plant being exposed to the atmosphere.

The study, done by a Washington law firm, said that 'before anyone appreciated the seriousness of the situation, Three Mile Island came close to being the accident we had been told by many in the industry could not happen: a core meltdown'.

It said: 'A shift foreman reporting for normal duty about two hours after the accident began undertook to survey some instruments and blocked off the stuck-open pressuriser valve that was leaking reactor coolant into the reactor containment building.'

The study said that if the valve had remained open 'our projections show that within 30 to 60 minutes a substantial amount of the reactor fuel would have begun to melt down.'

The study said that another nuclear accident, worse than that at Three Mile Island, was likely unless fundamental changes were made in the nuclear power industry.

It recommended that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission be restructured with substantially more of its resources going to the monitoring of reactors.

Unless basic changes are made, the report said, 'similar accidents — perhaps with the potentially serious consequences to public health and safety that were only narrowly averted at Three Mile Island — are likely to occur.'

Radiation leak

LIVERMORE, California — Radioactive-tainted water leaked from a nuclear laboratory tank here yesterday after an earthquake shook a 200-mile-wide area of northern California and injured 50 people, a laboratory spokesman said.

The earthquake, which struck on Thursday and has been followed by four strong aftershocks, swayed skyscrapers in San Francisco.

The spokesman said the water, which contained about half the level of radioactivity that could be dumped legally into a sewer, was dripping at a rate of about a quart a minute from a 30,000 gallon tank, but posed no danger to the public.

Iraqi warning

BAGHDAD — The Iraqi daily 'Al-Thawrah' has warned against turning Iran and Afghanistan into hotbeds of tension and test grounds for the export of imperialistic concepts.

The daily organ of the Arab Ba'ath Socialist Party also warned against imperialist attempts aimed at creating spheres of influence and meddling in the internal affairs of others.

The daily believes that the developments in Iran and Afghanistan reflect the sharp conflict between the two world camps.

Reviewing the different stands taken by various countries towards the developments in Afghanistan, the daily highlighted the stand expressing the attitudes of the peoples and adhering to the principles of neutrality and non-alignment.

Iraq, the daily said, firmly supports this stand, calling on the peoples of the area at the same time, to take such stands that are in harmony with their interests and independence and to prevent the recurrence of the events in Afghanistan, and exploiting these events as a card to justify alignment with the West and subservience to America.

OAU protest on Rhodesia

Sinai handover

EGYPT yesterday formally recovered another area of Sinai from Israel during a flag-raising ceremony.

In a speech marking the occasion, Egyptian military operations director brigadier general Abd-Rab Mabi Hafez said: 'The recovery of this part of Sinai showed clearly that wars are not always the only solution for the restoration of the rights of any nation.'

Provisions

He said Egypt and Israel showed people in the Middle East that 'comprehensive peace in the area is possible by implementing the provisions of the peace treaty in good faith'.

The Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) has called on all Arab workers to strike today against the opening of the Egyptian-Israeli border under the treacherous Sadat-Beigin-Carter deal.

AFRICAN delegates at the United Nations are seeking a Security Council meeting on British violations of the Lancaster House Rhodesia peace agreement and the continued presence of South African troops in the territory.

A formal request will be made within the next few days and the council is expected to convene some time next week, delegates said after a meeting of the African group.

The basis for the complaint is a resolution adopted earlier this week by the liberation committee of the Organisation of African Unity (OAU) in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania.

It charged gross violations by Britain in implementing the Lancaster House agreement, 'in particular, the deployment of Rhodesian and auxiliary forces who have been committing wanton murder and harassing of Patriotic Front sympathisers, and systematic Press and radio propaganda aimed at discrediting the Patriotic Front'.

The resolution called on Britain to ensure the immediate and complete withdrawal of South African troops, whose presence in Rhodesia it described as a threat to international peace and security.

The British government was condemned for its 'violations of the terms of the Lancaster House agreement, and for its manoeuvres to ensure the continuance in power of the Smith-Muzorewa group in the territory'.

Botswana yesterday accused the Rhodesian authorities of hindering the flow of refugees back into the country by confiscating trucks and arresting Botswana government drivers.

A statement from the President's office said the measures were aimed at delaying the repatriation process 'with the possible aim of depriving the refugees of the opportunity to participate in the electoral campaign and vote'.

Under the London agreement, more than 20,000 refugees are due to be returned to Rhodesia from Botswana before the February general election.

IRANIAN residents in London cast their votes in the country's presidential election at the embassy in Kensington yesterday.

First results in the election showed 46-year-old Finance Minister Abolhassan Bani-Sadr in the lead.

He was reported to have taken more than 80 per cent of the votes in some parts of Tehran.

His nearest rivals were former naval commander Ahmad Madani and revolutionary council spokesman Hassan Habibi.

One of the first to vote was revolutionary leader Ayatollah Khomeini. Officials took a polling box to his bedside at a Tehran hospital where he is being treated for a heart ailment.

Arab states denounce Carter plan

KUWAIT — Kuwait yesterday criticised President Carter's pledge to use force if necessary to protect the Gulf, describing it as interference in the affairs of Gulf states.

The Kuwaiti Minister of State for Cabinet Affairs, Abdel-Aziz Hussein, was quoted by the Kuwaiti newspapers 'Al-Rai Al-Aam' and 'Al-Qabas' as saying 'the defence of the Gulf is the concern of its peoples and they reject any interference in their affairs'.

Address

Carter said in his state of the union address to Congress on Wednesday that an attempt by an outside force to gain control of the Gulf region would be regarded as an assault. Such action would be repelled by use of any means necessary, including military force, he said.

'The people of this region are capable of preserving their own security and stability,' Hussein was quoted as saying.

In the United Arab Emirates (UAE), the newspaper 'Al-Itihad' said the US was using the Soviet action in Afghanistan as an excuse to expand its military presence in the Gulf.

The paper said in an editorial, quoted by the official Emirates news agency (WAM), 'The big powers only want us as a market for weapons, a source of oil, and an experimental battlefield.'

In Damascus, Syrian newspapers also attacked the Carter administration for what they termed its interference in Middle East and Gulf affairs.

The government newspaper 'Tishrin' said threats by the United States to interfere by force in the area's affairs constituted 'a flagrant aggressive interference which will be rejected, denounced and resisted if necessary.'

The Arabs would refuse to turn the Arab world into an American state and would not accept American tutelage, it added.

Threat

'Al-Ba'ath', organ of the ruling Arab Ba'ath socialist Party, said the American threat was not the first of its kind. 'The Arab masses have exercised many such threats and have foiled them. They now stand in cohesion and tenacity to foil the new American onslaught,' it said.

The semi-official newspaper 'Al-Thawra' said: 'Carter cannot intimidate us nor can he force us to kneel down or bring the Gulf area under his tutelage.'

Huge price rise in Turkey

ANKARA — The Turkish government yesterday increased the price of all consumer oil products by between 44 and 100 per cent following a two-tier devaluation of the lira on Thursday.

According to an official decree, the price of petrol was increased by almost half to 32 lira per litre ($2.07 per gallon) for super.

Diesel, kerosene and fuel oil were doubled in price.

The government suspended the sale of iron, steel, cement, paper and oil products, pending large price increases expected to be announced later.

On Thursday the lira was devalued by an average of 35 per cent against the dollar.

Devaluation

The devaluation was aimed at attracting foreign credits to push up Turkey's bankrupt economy.

Part of the financial package was that the country's crucial oil imports would now be paid for at the general exchange rate, 70 lira to the dollar.

Previously oil imports were purchased at the exceptional rate of 35 lira per dollar. The scrapping of a special import price means the country is now paying twice as much for crude oil.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF), which many countries regard as a barometer of a nation's creditworthiness, has long been pushing Ankara to devalue the lira.

The devaluation is expected to be followed by other measures including consumer price rises and slashing credits to the public sector.

The two-month old right-wing government of premier Suleyman Demirel had been widely expected to devalue the lira several weeks ago but apparently delayed the announcement after the Turkish military threatened to seize power.

Condition

The devaluation is believed to be a condition of the IMF for further cash credits to Turkey, suffering from its worst-ever economic crisis.

Turkish external debts are at present estimated at around $18 billion, including interest, and its total exports are not enough to cover its oil import bill alone.

A steelman's diary

DAY 24

THE DIARY of a steelworker continues today with a contribution from Scunthorpe. This diary is proving extremely popular as rank-and-file steelmen trace the progress of their strike through their own experiences. We are endeavouring to draw the diary from different parts of the country to get as wide a reaction as possible to the day-by-day events.

These are the views of a young steelworker in Scunthorpe.

I THINK the government will try to starve us out. They are prepared to let this drag on until the men are forced back to work because they have no money. The Tories provoked the strike to enable the people with money to protect their system and to keep the working class in their place.

No effect

They want to show the whole trade union movement that they are the masters and that no matter how much you protest or strike, it will have no effect.

As I see it, it's them and us and it's coming to revolution. I used to say this at work and blokes thought I was daft. But now they're beginning to wake up.

The TUC must be forced to call a general strike which brings the country to a standstill and hits the businessman where it hurts — in their pockets. This is the only way to overrun their system.

But the TUC leaders are scared. Half the union representatives just do as they like. We had one union rep who made tea for the manager and we've had others who just used their privileged position to get as much overtime as possible.

When we've had disputes in the works our reps often sided with the management.

We've got to have this rise. We can't live on our present wages and the cost of living is just rocketing. Half the working class are just waiting for a lead. They hate the Tories.

When they get a leadership that will take them where they want to go, they'll overthrow this system. But they need a new leadership.

Moderates

Half the Labour MPs are just out for careers. They don't care about us. As for the union leaders, these so-called moderates are ruining the unions. Many older workers are conditioned to accept this system but they're slowly seeing the light.

Strikers' 'friends' hide the crucial issues

STEELWORKERS don't have to look far these days for militant expressions of support for their strike and the wage demands they put before the British Steel Corporation.

Revisionist political groups and their weekly newspapers are full of enthusiasm for the fight over pay.

'Pay the steelworkers: 20 per cent and no strings', says state capitalist 'Socialist Worker'. 'On to victory', proclaims revisionist 'Socialist Challenge' quoting in awe from remarks made recently by the Yorkshire miners' leader Arthur Scargill.

There is no shortage of comment here, urging steelmen to battle on.

Search

But strikers will search in vain through these publications and through the policies of the politically bankrupt groups which they represent, for anything more than empty phrase-mongering and 'left' talk.

Nowhere in these quarters will strikers and their supporters find an analysis or a clear statement of policy which takes into account the fact that the wage struggle is part of political fight against the Tories and the capitalist state.

Nowhere is it made clear that the issue is jobs and not wages — that is, an issue which cannot be resolved by trade union action alone.

The militant mouthpieces — Arthur Scargill included — are deliberately confusing the crucial issues before steelworkers now and posed before steelmen and the entire working class.

They consciously encourage the view that strikes and trade union militancy alone can defeat the Tories and the state, the steel cutback plans of the Common Market commissioners, the slump in world steel markets and the world capitalist crisis.

After three-and-a-half weeks on the picket line, steelmen are well aware that there is no such thing as a 'short, sharp' political strike. The enemy has come out declaring 'There can be no compromise' and has the help of the TUC leaders in setting negotiation traps for the strikers.

The Tories are determined to defeat the strike, smash up the unions, impose their slump closures and sack at least 64,000 men — 52,000 from closures and the rest in 'productivity' terms.

They have the forces of the state — the army and police — at their disposal as well as the courts. Police and the judges have already been put to use.

Right from the start of the strike the Workers Revolutionary Party and All Trades Unions Alliance have stated clearly that the issue in the steel strike goes far beyond a wages struggle.

What is posed immediately and urgently is the question of the ownership, control and financing of all basic industry.

What faces steelmen and the working class is not just another strike and a protest over job cuts — it is a 'no compromise' struggle for power against the Tories and the state.

Obscure

And it is not an accident that right-wingers, reformists, revisionists and Stalinists obscure and conceal these issues.

'Socialist Worker' and 'Socialist Challenge' prefer to talk glibly about the victory of a pay struggle, rather than put these vital issues before the working class as the Workers Revolutionary Party does each day.

The policies of the All Trades Unions Alliance for steelworkers, put forward as part of the struggle for power, are contained in a special ATUA statement which can be obtained, along with information about the policies of the Workers Revolutionary Party, by writing to: The General Secretary, 21b Old Town, Clapham, London SW4 0JT.

7,000 join Newport march

MORE than 7,000 steelworkers and their supporters marched through Newport, South Wales yesterday.

The demonstration — the biggest the town has seen this century — expressed working class hatred for the wage-cutting policies of the Tory government and the British Steel Corporation and their plans to wipe out steelmaking and coal mining in the area.

Steelmen from BSC plants in Newport, Ebbw Vale and Pontypool, supported by miners and engineers, took part.

Chanting 'Thatcher out!', 'Joseph out!', 'Villiers out!' and '20 per cent now!', the huge column of marchers was applauded by bystanders as it passed through the town centre to a mass rally in the Civic Centre car park.

Several speakers at the rally said the march invoked memories of the Chartist riots in Newport which shook the capitalist class nearly 150 years ago.

John Foley, divisional organiser for the ISTC, said: 'The BSC treated us like dogs and decided to take us on.'

He said the BSC chiefs had shifted steel into 'warehouses and sheds throughout South Wales, and then looked to Germany for steel to break the strike'.

Banner

Pointing to the giant banner from the International Metalworkers Federation, Foley said that steel union leaders all over the world had pledged to block all steel exports to Britain.

'Two of our executive members travelled to Calais

Steelworkers and their supporters

this week and won assurances that the international blockade would stay,' he said.

Foley welcomed this international solidarity and referred to the world crisis in the steel industry. But he then put forward the bankrupt, reformist policy of import controls to defend the jobs of 'British steelworkers'. The rally warmly applauded a speaker from the National

No to jobs sell-out

SCOTLAND

'THE way I see it, we're not just fighting for wages,' said Ravenscraig steel worker Willie Martin as he boarded a coach carrying pickets northwards out of Lanarkshire yesterday.

'I'm not a job seller, I'm a job holder — holding it for the benefit of future generations.'

Willie, chairman of Ravenscraig ISTC No.1 branch, was one of 70 flying pickets who travelled from Motherwell yesterday to Aberdeen.

'Every cut that Maggie makes is eating away at the future of the younger generation, in my opinion. Leaving school to go straight on the dole is no life to look forward to.'

'I can talk this way because I've got two kids myself and I want them to have a better life than we're having now. I want a civilisation that says all for one and one for all,' said Willie, an active Labour Party member.

Most of the pickets had only a few coppers in their pockets but were clearly determined that for the next week they would bring all steel movements in north-east Scotland to a halt.

Possessed

One picket, who possessed only 3½p and a packet of cheese sandwiches, explained: 'On a basic week I take home only £60. Out of this I have to pay £138 a month mortgage and look after my wife and wean.'

'Since we came out on strike, the only money that's come in the house was £4 family allowance. I've been down to the Social Security twice already and filled in three forms, but my wife has received nothing yet.'

'Maggie won't succeed in

OFF TO THE GRANITE CITY! That coach in Motherwell yesterday to industry

starving me out, though. They may have thought they were picking on the weakest union, but now we're far from it. The strings attached to the offer would set us back 40 or 50 years.'

Strike committee chairman John McTaggart, leading the picketing expedition, commented: 'We're going to the north-east to cement the good relations that other pickets have already made there.'

marched 7,000 strong through Newport yesterday

Union of Mineworkers. Alan Baker, lodge secretary of Oakdale pit, said: 'The government made the biggest mistake of its life when it took you on.'

Assistance

Baker assured the steel-strikers that miners would give them whatever assistance they needed.

Alongside trade union banners condemning the Tories and BSC bosses was a placard with a clear message for Wales TUC secretary, George Wright. It read: 'Unite and fight — Wright'.

Wright, along with several Labour MPs, was asked to address the rally, but declined the invitation.

The steel strikers bitterly attacked Wright and other transport union leaders for encouraging drivers to cross picket lines, and for delaying an all-out strike to defend jobs in the coal and steel industries.

Expected

However, thousands of steelworkers, miners, railwaymen, dockers and transport workers are expected to join a one-day strike and mass rally in Cardiff on Monday.

Scunthorpe firm to axe 500 jobs

A NEW attack on Scunthorpe steel workers was launched yesterday with the announcement that Richard Dorman and Long will axe 500 jobs when the company's operations are incorporated into BSC in March.

The company employs 1,250 workers, mainly boiler-makers.

Most RDL work is contract work for BSC and the contraction of BSC steel production in Scunthorpe is blamed for the job loss.

About 6,000 redundancies are already planned for Scunthorpe BSC. Phil Guymmer, a member of the National Union of Blastfurnacemen's national negotiation committee said that the new jobs cut was nothing to do with the strike but was a part of the cuts proposed before the strike began.

'And we've already made it known that we don't accept these proposals,' he added.

The Scunthorpe strike committee is stepping up picketing especially in Lincoln and Phil Guymmer estimated that by next week most of the area's steel stockists will be critically short of steel.

STEVEN DARTNELL, Jim Hooper and Jane Bertish in the Citizens' Company production

Brecht did not see it like this

FEARS AND MISERIES OF THE THIRD REICH by Bertolt Brecht

THE production at the Citizens' Theatre in Glasgow's Gorbals has left a bad taste in my mouth.

Giles Havergal has directed Brecht's play with the apparent aim of sowing confusion and pessimism about the role of the working class.

The production implies that fascism would be the most likely outcome in Britain of an economic crisis similar to that of the 1930s.

The tone is set right at the beginning of the play, when Havergal has a Nazi come on stage with clenched fist raised high to greet the news that Hitler has been appointed Chancellor.

The play spotlights scenes from homes, shops, factories and courts, showing how the defeated working class and progressive sections of the middle class were ground down under Hitler's fascist terror.

Statement

And it ends with the statement that the Germans brought it on themselves by each and every one of them supporting Hitler in the first place.

To back up his interpretation, Havergal has issued with the programme notes a handout quoting from William Shirer's Rise and Fall of the Third Reich, which claims:

'Hitler was liquidating the past, with all its frustrations and disappointments. Step by step, and rapidly, he was confounding the victorious Allies and making Germany militarily strong again, freeing Germany from the shackles of the Treaty of Versailles signed in 1919 which severely limited the size of the German armed forces.'

This is what most Germans wanted and they were willing to make the sacrifices which the Leader demanded of them to get it.

Well, let me quote from that same book!

Shirer reports how 100,000 workers gathered in Berlin to oppose Hitler the night before his appointment as Chancellor (page 1).

The last election of the Weimar Republic saw Hitler's vote decline to 196 deputies while the Social Democrats and the Communist Party had a combined 221 deputies elected (page 217).

Hitler was imposed on the German masses as a result of the corruption of the Social Democratic leadership and the Stalinists' policy of 'social fascism'. With this term the Communist Party indicted the Social Democratic party and blocked the unity of the working class.

Only with this tactical unity, which was urgently recommended by Trotsky at the time, could Hitler have been successfully opposed.

Brecht wrote this play as part of a struggle to understand and oppose fascism. (It was published for the first time in Prague in 1938, just as Hitler was invading Czechoslovakia.)

Havergal has undermined that struggle. The whole production distorts the causes of fascism and must be approached very cautiously and critically.

The play runs at the Citizens' until Saturday February 9.

'If Food Be the Music of Love, Eat on' is the first episode of a new comedy series 'Pig in the Middle' on ITV this Sunday at 8.45 with Joanna Van Gyseghem, Dinsdale Landen and Liza Goddard

A message from M. Banda WRP General Secretary

MANY GROUPS in Britain celebrated the centenary year of Trotsky's birth, but only the Workers Revolutionary Party could do so with genuine pride and an enviable satisfaction.

The Workers Revolutionary Party alone has fought for and developed the theory and programme of Trotsky in unbroken continuity from the period of his death to the present day. It defended his principles not only against the Stalinist detractors, but the revisionists as well.

Only the Workers Revolutionary Party and its comrades abroad, has conducted the most detailed and comprehensive investigation into the murder of Leon Trotsky and revealed the sordid connections between the revisionist leaders, such as the late Joseph Hansen and the agencies of imperialism in the GPU and the FBI.

The finest proof of this record of sustained struggle is the first Trotskyist daily paper — the Workers Press and its successor, the daily News Line. No other group could do this because every one of them long ago abandoned the struggle for dialectical materialist method in the development of theory as a guide to revolutionary practice.

Who can doubt the central importance of Trotsky's struggle today and the continuity of that struggle embodied in the Workers Revolutionary Party? Every major attack by the Tories on jobs, wages and social services and every retreat by the union leaders and Stalinists, reveals not only the impotence of trade union reformism and class collaboration, but also the vital, indispensable necessity for a revolutionary party to:

GIVE political leadership to the working class.

ANALYSE the connection between the economic crisis and its political implications.

SPELL OUT the menace of the capitalist state intervention.

OUTLINE the prospects for taking political power and defeating the employers, the Tories and their capitalist state.

Only the Workers Revolutionary Party has a consistent revolutionary socialist policy which can and will unite the working class in struggle on the basis of the Transitional Programme of the Fourth International.

Now, after the highly-successful rally at the Conference Centre, Wembley, on November 4, the Workers Revolutionary Party has decided to take the Centenary Campaign into the provinces and make it the basis for major recruitment.

We call on all workers, students, youth and unemployed to complete the task begun by Trotsky and Lenin in the October Revolution, to join the WRP, expand the circulation of News Line and build the revolutionary alternative to Stalinism and reformism.

WINNING POST

John's treble chance

JOHN FRANCOME's season has soured by injury but the champion jockey is a match for anybody when fit and he can prove it with a valuable treble at CHELTENHAM.

NIMRODY (1.00), his ride in the Tote Jackpot Handicap Chase finally got off the mark last time out in an amateur rider's event at Sandown.

It was the nine-year-old's fifth attempt of the season on top of failing to score last term.

Fred Winter's decision to run Nimrody could hinge on the knowledge that the likely favourite, Dramatist, has yet to tackle two-and-a-half miles over fences.

Nimrody is in receipt of 12lbs from Fulke Walwyn's charge and this could prove decisive.

Roller-coaster had previously accounted for Katmandu and Jer at Haydock.

With Drusus dodging the contest for an event at Doncaster, Roller-Coaster should oblige and his name supporters will be hoping his fencing is less nerve-racking than his name suggests.

The winter-Francome duo can complete a good pay day with Hectare (2.45) in the Bibury Novices Handicap Chase. He could not cope with Narbinni and Dramatist at Chesham, but drop in class should pay dividends here.

Francome's northern rival, Tommy Carmody, is also set for a three-timer with victories on the Tony Dickinson trio, Tommy Joe (2.30), I'm a driver (2.00) and Visconti (3.00) at DONCASTER.

Tommy Joe gets a narrow vote in the William Hill Yorkshire Handicap Chase following a half-length defeat by Jack's Flutter at Catterick last week.

HARLOW's FA Cup trail began ten matches ago back in September, while Watford were beginning to adjust to life in Division Two.

The preliminary round saw Harlow scrape home by 2-1 against Lowestoft Town.

Now this collection of manual workers, teachers and professional men are looking for their third League scalp in a Cup campaign which has won them many friends.

Watford manager Graham Taylor is only half-joking when he says his side are the underdogs for today's clash at Vicarage Road.

Their wins over Southend and Leicester were no flukes. Both were achieved after hard-won away draws.

The only consolation for Watford is that they won't have to play on Harlow's tiny council ground if there is a replay, with the Isthmian

BY MATTHEW NUGENT

League side settling for Highbury as the venue for a second match.

Manager Ian Wolstenholme, who played for England at amateur level, said:

'Our preparation for the match against Watford has been the same for all our Cup matches this season. We simply play it down.

'A good Cup run is great for the club and the local community but winning the League is what it's all about.'

The club had won nothing before Wolstenholme arrived at the end of the 1977/1978 season.

Then in their centenary season they won Division One of the Isthmian League and won the Essex Senior Cup.

League and club records were broken, Harlow losing only seven of the 67 competitive matches they played.

Wolstenholme said of the club's FA Cup run: 'The lads have lifted themselves on four occasions this season to beat League opposition and in that respect I don't feel worried about Watford.

'I'm sure that they're more worried about us. They haven't had too good a season and they obviously would like to have a good run in the Cup, but we aren't going to give them an easy ride.

'Our biggest advantage in the last two rounds of the Cup was that we were better organised than Southend and Leicester. They probably have better teams than Harlow but we beat them because we were a better organised outfit on the day. It will be the same on Saturday, I'm sure.'

Insisted

Goalkeeper Paul Kitson added: 'The manager has insisted that we just go out and enjoy ourselves in this game. That's the reason we've got so far.

'We've regarded our run in the Cup as a bonus and not something that was life and death. We are very confident, however, of grabbing a good result at Watford.'

Mark warns Gunners

THOUGH Arsenal have beaten Brighton three times already this season, centre-back David O'Leary is not complacent about today's fourth round FA Cup clash at Highbury.

He said: 'Brighton have had a tremendous run lately. when we played them at the start of the season they seemed to be overawed by the whole thing, but their recent results are bound to give them confidence.

'The way they are playing at the moment you have to discount our win against them in the Football League Cup. They were going through their bad patch then. It will be much harder on Saturday.'

Returns

O'Leary returns to the Arsenal side for his first game since December. The Gunners field the side that won the FA Cup at Wembley last May.

A feature of Brighton's revival has been the 'discovery' of Mark Lawrenson as a midfield player after returning from an injury he suffered as a centre-half.

Lawrenson said confidently: 'I think we can pull off one of the surprises of the day and beat Arsenal.

'We are a completely different team than the one who played there in the League Cup.

'This one has its confidence back. Last week's result against Spurs is only a minor set back. Watch out Arsenal!'

Mariner is key for Ipswich

BY A SPORTS LINE REPORTER

THERE are few away bankers in the FA Cup, but most people would be surprised if Ipswich failed to win at Ashton Gate today.

Ipswich rehearsed the match with a 3-0 over Bristol City in the League last Saturday.

And Division One's most informal side is hotly fancied to repeat the medicine.

Ipswich have come from the foot of the table to challenge for a place in Europe next season.

The reshaped forward line of Alan Brazil, Eric Gates and Paul Mariner has shown deadly form. He is leading scorer with 10 goals as Ipswich have won eight out of their last nine games.

The return to form of England striker Mariner, especially, has coincided with Ipswich's fine run. Bobby Robson, the Ipswich manager said: 'I'd be foolish if I didn't feel confident about this one.

Disorganised

'They seem a completely disorganised side at the moment and Alan Dicks has his problems. But you never know with the Cup so I've warned the lads accordingly.'

City manager Dicks admitted: 'Ipswich are the real team in form at the moment as we found out last week. But the Cup is a different kettle of fish and I believe we can overcome them this Saturday and enjoy the Cup match.

FA CUP SPECIAL

IT'S OUR WEMBLEY

HUNGRY

WHAT started the season as potentially the most dynamic striking partnership in Division One has run out of steam in mid-season.

And the inability of John Richards and Andy Gray to find the net with real consistency is worrying the Wolves management.

Chances were missed at Swindon in the mid-week League Cup semi-final first leg, and the Molineux men trail by 2-1 as a result.

Wolves face a real FA Cup test against in-form Norwich at home.

And with Kevin Reeves and Justin Fashanu back in action together, Wolves know they have their work cut out.

Happy

Assistant manager Richie Barker admitted yesterday that manager John Barnwell had not been happy with the side's form in recent games, which have seen them slip down the Division One table.

He added: 'Our strikers seem to have lost their way a little in the last few weeks, although many chances have been made for them.'

'We can't afford to miss chances against a team like Norwich, who have to be probably the most improved team in the First Division this season.'

'However, I think after John's chat with the players we may see a return to the style that made us so exciting to watch at the start of the season.'

'And if we do, then it's watch out Norwich!'

Wolves add Emlyn Hughes and Wayne Clark to their squad, while Martin Peters and Reeves have shaken off injuries.

SAY WIGAN

BY PAUL FELDMAN

WIGAN manager Ian McNeill, who guided the club into the Football League, is clear about the sense of occasion at Goodison Park today.

The Fourth Division side travel to one of the richest and most famous clubs in Britain on the FA Cup giantkillers' trail.

'It's possibly our Wembley,' McNeill told News Line. 'They're be approaching 50,000 there and I hope we can take 20,000 of them to Goodison.'

Wigan, in the middle of a fine run that has taken them to the fringe of the promotion race, face an Everton side whose lack of consistency has caused manager Gordon Lee severe problems.

That, plus the levelling out that goes with Cup games, only adds to Wigan's confidence, although McNeill's perspective is slightly different to Lee's.

'Let's face it, we're starting from scratch in the League. And the more good results we get enhances the club. If we can get a result at Goodison it might mean that we're closer to gates of 10,000.'

Biggest

'We've done great in the Cup and we would like to continue it. Beating Chelsea in the last round was the biggest thing in the club's history.'

'At Everton we won't be lacking in spirit. We will run and we will scrap and play a lot of football. And if we do lose it won't be because we haven't played football.'

For Everton manager Lee there is the obvious realisation that today's match could bring his side's season to a premature conclusion if things go badly wrong.

'In terms of winning anything this season, it can only be the FA Cup,' he conceded. 'We could win a place in Europe by stringing some good results together but you

season depends on this on, though have to assume the FA Cup is the best bet.'

Dominated by the success in the city of neighbours Liverpool, the Goodison fans have been quick to voice their frustration at the lack of honours enjoyed by Everton.

The season began badly for Lee when four players demanded transfers. Three — Dave Thomas, Mike Pejic and Martin Dobson left.

Said Lee: 'We have had an inconsistent season. We got a bad start when three players went, and now we have three more in plaster, Mark Higgins, Andy King and John Barton.'

'With new players coming into the team all the time it has been difficult to get a pattern of play.'

Defeat in the League Cup at Grimsby brought renewed pressure on Lee, who publicly states that unsuccessful managers can expect nothing else but the sack.

But he says the directors back him and added: 'There's been no more pressure on me here than anywhere else and I don't feel any different.'

Carry on

'My approach is not to go looking for that kind of pressure, because you can find it if you want to. You just carry on doing your job.'

'Halifax beat Manchester City in the Cup, although Manchester City would beat them nine times out of ten. But that doesn't make City a bad side or the manager a bad manager.'

'There will always be Cup shocks in January and February because of the English weather. Skilful players look less skilful and the games are not necessarily decided by the teams with the better players.

'But you won't get shocks after this round when we're down to the last 16 so we should be all right if we win against Wigan.'

Lee respects Wigan and had them watched carefully in the last round at Stamford Bridge. 'We have better players than theirs, but we will have to work hard for each other.'

'Wigan battled away at Chelsea on a difficult pitch and I don't underestimate them at all.'

Everton expect to be unchanged, although Garry Stanley has a late test on a pelvic strain and Trevor Ross stands by.

Hughton brothers aiming for Wembley

TWO brothers with FA Cup glory on their minds today are Chris and Henry Hughton, of Spurs and Orient respectively.

Chris, an Irish international in his first season as a full-time professional, has a tough encounter lined up at Swindon.

The Wiltshire side have already accounted for three First Division sides in the League Cup this season.

But Chris said: 'Everybody keeps warning me of the dangers that might face us at Swindon. We are all very aware of them and have been told by the boss what we have to watch out for.'

Chances

'I'm sure a lot of First Division clubs would be happy to settle for a draw at Swindon, but we are going there to win.'

Henry's side face near neighbours West Ham in the all-London clash of the round, and he says: 'We are all looking forward to the game at the club.'

'I cannot see them beating us here. It should be a really good match as we are both playing pretty well at the moment.'

'We have a score to settle with them as well as they beat us here 4-0 recently and we are out for revenge.'

THE FORGOTTEN
MEN

LORD'S are likely to insist on a traditional six-Test tour when England next come to Australia in the winter of 1982.

The current tour, with Tests and one-day games involving both Australia and the West Indies has not worked out for players on the fringe of the senior side.

With the emphasis on international matches, players like

Captain of India

GUNDAPPA VISWANATH was yesterday named to lead India in the sixth and final Test against Pakistan starting in Calcutta next week. Viswanath's brother-in-law, Sunil Gavaskar, quit as skipper last week after India won the fifth Test and the series.

John Lever and Graham Stevens have spent most of their time off the field.

Stevenson came to Australia at the end of November as a replacement for the injured Mike Hendrick.

And like Lever he has not been able to settle into a rhythm because of the lack of match practice.

During the past 11 weeks Lever has played in only eight matches, including three one-day games, while Stevenson has managed only four games, including two limited-over fixtures.

Tomorrow's three-day match against New South Wales is crucial because it is the last game before the third and final Test against Australia in Melbourne on February 1.

England will be without pace men Graham Dilley, Bob Willis and Ian Botham, who are all recovering from injuries.

JOHN LEVER . . . odd man out

Leeds' double bonus from Peru

LEEDS manager Jimmy Adamson received a surprise when Raul Garritti arrived from Peru yesterday with a fellow player.

Garritti, a 22-year-old mid-field player, has played 22 times for Peru.

Chairman Bloye's dream palace

CRYSTAL PALACE, billed as the team of the eighties, want a stadium to match their playing ambitions.

The south London club are planning a new £7 million all-seater stadium.

Chairman Ray Bloye has written to Croydon council suggesting the redevelopment of a nearby 140-acre sewage farm.

Bloye sees the stadium as part of a huge sports complex. 'We are doing this completely on our own.'

He believes Palace could have moved from Selhurst Park within five years.

'The money would be no problem as we own our own ground at the moment.'

Bloye's plan is to share the site with industrial or commercial concerns.

Meanwhile, back on the playing side, Palace expect England full back Kenny Sansom and midfield man Gerry Francis for their rearranged game against West Brom.

Sansom has missed seven matches with hamstring trouble and Francis has been out for four games with bruised ribs.

West Brom bring in Reni Moses, an 18-year-old mid-field player for his League debut.

Same again please!

BRIAN CLOUGH sprang another surprise on Liverpool yesterday when he omitted Stan Bowles from his line-up for part two of the private war with Liverpool at the City Ground.

Bowles must have thought he would play against Liverpool in the fourth round of the FA Cup after missing Forest's League Cup semi-final match through ineligibility.

But Clough has decided that if a side is good enough to beat Liverpool on a Tuesday, it can do the job on a Saturday as well.

The Forest manager said: 'It's the same side, the same substitute (Kenny Burns) and we hope the same result.'

Bowles had played in seven games since his £250,000 signing from QPR in mid-December, but Clough explained:

'While it's a temptation to put someone like Stan Bowles in the side, we are just not sure whether he is ready for a Liverpool Cup tie at the moment.'

'But we know for sure that the 12 players we have picked are.'

Dave Needham continues in the back four in preference to Scottish international Burns, and Clough added:

'We are delighted with the League Cup showing and will be equally delighted if they repeat it.'

Liverpool, who have won only once in 10 meetings between the two soccer giants in the past three seasons, keep an unchanged side for the 17th successive match.

Manager Bob Paisley refuses to panic over a record of two defeats and a draw in Liverpool's last three matches.

He said: 'You couldn't improve on our performance on Tuesday apart from putting the ball in the net — and that's what we have to do this time.

The fact that this is the FA Cup compared to the two-legged League Cup won't put any more pressure on the players.

'You would get pressure even in a friendly against Forest that's how these games have built up over the years.'

Liverpool feel they outplayed Forest on Tuesday only to lose to a last-minute penalty. They will be happy to take Forest back to Anfield for a replay this time.

But if Peter Shilton plays as well as he did on Tuesday, who knows what might happen!
